

We understand that talking about sports can get heated, especially with rival fans popping in from time to time, so don't worry if you drop a swear word, we won't mind too much (though excessive profanity will see your comment deleted).

That said, there are several things that are obviously unacceptable. Personally attacking the authors or readers of this site will not be tolerated, and anyone who crosses this line will be subject to a ban. Do not post vitriol for the sake of being hateful. Please try to reply the same way you would want people to reply to your comments. Just be nice. Try to generate conversation instead of generating snark or being purely argumentative.

In addition to personal attacks, no racism, sexism (including calling a player a woman's name as a misguided attempt at an insult), homophobia, or discrimination based on religion will be tolerated. This is an all-inclusive website, and we simply will not tolerate hate speech.

Discussion of unsubstantiated rumours regarding players' personal lives will not be permitted, and will be subject to a warning. Talking about a personal subject a player has personally broached will be allowed so long as the discourse is civil and respectful.

Links to illegal content are not permitted, including any unofficial streams for games.

If you see a comment that you believe violates these rules, please don't hesitate to add a flag to it to help us find it and deal with it in the appropriate manner.

For most offences, a warning will be sent stating what line you crossed, giving you a second chance to be a voice within our community. However, we reserve the right to make an outright ban for persistent or particularly egregious violations of our moderation rules.

If there's an issue with how we've handled a moderation issue, you can email us directly at habseyesontheprize@gmail.com. We will not have debates about our moderation decisions in the comments.